

Randy Fredlund lives on Stewarts Landing, the outlet of Canada Lake, in the town of Stratford.

He is an avid nature photographer and writer of blogs. In past lives, he was an engineer, inventor, and entrepreneur. Randy worked at Eastman Kodak for almost 30 years as a Senior Researcher, Inventor, and Technology and Intellectual Property Manager. He has over 100 patents in the field of digital imaging. A few of them were somewhat valuable.

After retiring, Fredlund was one of the principals at Vivid-Pix, a software company making image improvement accessible to everyone. His image-processing acumen was key in implementing easy-to-use image fixes. Business savvy? Not so much.

Randy and his wife Mary are currently splitting time between Saratoga Springs, NY, and the Adirondacks. His pursuits include wildlife photography, travel, curling, camping, hiking, paddling, skiing, and then blogging about all the adventures.

If you are interested (and brave or foolish), Randy will be happy to put you on his blog distribution list for a once-weekly stream of images and thoughts.
